AS A PART OF SPEECH.

(The latest fulmination against woman's condition declares that while man is a noun, woman is merely a preposition.)

Only a preposition? Nay, a woman's more than that When it comes to being a part of speech, she's on the job there pat;

For speech and every part of it is woman's natural field.

And not an inch of it to man, rest all assured, she'll yield.

She'd not give her prerogative to dwindle in one word

A little usimportant one, which last should not be heard.

Oh, no; Of all the foolish talk, that is a little peach.

To say a woman's only but the measilent of the last of speech.

She is a noun—or just as good, for person, place or thing.

Are either doing work for her or something to her bring.

She is a pronoun, for she stands for each male noun to bose.

And when it romes to adjectives, what woman's at a loss?

An adverb, too, she qualifies whatever man may do.

Or what he is or how he acis—but why the list pursue?

Except to say she is a verb—the cause for this pursuing.

Tis very clear, where woman is there's always something doing.

there's always something doing.

A preposition? Only that? Yes, that and all the rest.
That man had he'er monopoly of speech must be confessed.

Just see how silent he is now when charge on charge is heard.

He trembles fore a suffragette, afraid to say a word.

No, woman's not one part of speech, she's the whole blooming nine.

And man is but a rushlight suuffed when she doth please to shine.

She is the Properest Noun of all whenever she sees fit.

In fact, to put it in a word, poor woman—she is "It!"

Immigration from Europe is turning to Chile quite strongly. Scarcely a steamship arrives without a number of immigrants. The Italian steamship Chile brought 1,667 on its last voy-

The ocean appears blue because feep water reflects only the blue rays of light. Shallow water look green because the blue rays are mixed with the yellow reflected from the sand on The delcette, which is probably one of the newest musical instruments placed on the market, is a harp played on a keyboard similar to that of a plano. The lower half of the instru-ment somewhat resembles the plane and the upper portion is like an Ital-lum harp.

The area of northern Nigeria is about 300,000 square miles and the population in 1904 was estimated at 5,000,000; much higher figures are often given however. The general configuration of the country is fairly level, rising from an elevation of 200 to 300 feet at Lokoja to 1,800 feet at Zaria, and falling back to 450 feet at Lake Tchad in the north. Some parts are hilly, and in a portion of the Banchi province the mountains rises to over 5,000 feet.

An Impossible Contingency. If we may believe the southern pa-pers. Mr Taft is about to establish possum in the place of turkey as the national piece de resistance.—Cleveland Leader.
